Official Argentine Seeks To Counteract Anti-Semitism Of Extremists, Technique To Disrupt Country

The Argentine Government is affirming its friendship with the Argentine Jewish community and seeking to counteract anti-Semitic propaganda.

Official statements have denounced in blunt language the existence of small groups of extremists spreading "violence and division", reports the New York Times. Anti-Semitism, it is pointed out, is a technique used to disrupt democratic institutions.

The Government has been unstinting in its congratulatory messages to Jewish organizations, which celebrated last month the 75th anniversary of the arrival of the first Jewish settlers from Russia.

Speaking on behalf of President Arturo U. Illia, Carlos S. Palmero warmly praised the contribution of the Jewish community to Argentina's growth. He was the principal speaker at a rally commemorating the founding in 1889 of a rural cooperative sponsored by the Jewish Colonization Association.

Vice President Carlos H. Perette, who has emerged as a principal figure in what seems to be a careful effort to restore confidence to the Jewish community after a wave of anti-Semitic incidents in recent years, sent a congratulatory message.

Dr. Palmero described the Government's efforts to broaden feelings of tolerance and to instill a greater sense of national unity, which has been shaken lately by the followers of Juan D. Perón, the exiled dictator.

"We seek healing for even the hatred, violence, and distrust that still linger in our midst," he told 1,500 representatives of Jewish organizations.

Simultaneously, but without any apparent connection with the anniversary, Juan Carlos Cornejo Linares, a Peronist deputy, made public a letter from Mr. Perón, who is in exile in Spain, endorsing a campaign to investigate "the international Zionist conspiracy," says the New York Times. Cornejo Linares also warned that he and his followers were prepared to use force to bring Mr. Perón back to Argentina if his entry was barred by the Government.

It was the second time in 10 days that anti-Semitism and the Peronist line were publicly linked.

During a Peronist rally of October 17 to demand Mr. Perón's return, some of the noisiest demonstrators were 700 youths of Tacuara, an anti-Semitic terrorist organization.

During Mr. Perón's regime, which lasted from 1946 to 1955, the Government publicly condemned anti-Semitism and was one of the first to recognize the state of Israel. But some of Mr. Perón's close collaborators, presumably with his consent, systematically harassed Jewish business and civic organizations.

Because of his unconcealed admiration for Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy, Mr. Perón's outward friendship toward certain leaders of the Jewish community was seen as being primarily motivated by tactical considerations.

In his address, Dr. Palmero said that the Jews, like subsequent other waves of immigrants, had helped to develop an atmosphere of cooperation, tolerance, and understanding, "being [illegible] the ambitions of all totalitarians," says the New York Times. The Jewish community in Argentina now approaches 500,000 members.

See Attempt To Obscure Civil Rights, Poverty, War Danger In Election Use Of Morals Case

An "emergency committee" of prominent Protestant, Roman Catholic, and Jewish churchmen issued a strong protest against the use of the Jenkins case in the Presidential election campaign.

They said that the case and a few other "episodes involving personal morality" had been allowed to "obscure fateful moral issues related to public life," such as civil rights, poverty, and the danger of nuclear war.

The committee, representing a broad spectrum of the major faiths, said that if there was a security aspect to the case it should be "dealt with on its own terms by those competent to do so and let it not serve chiefly as an excuse for dwelling on this episode to cater to the prurient curiosity or to the self-righteousness of part of the public."

The only name mentioned in the statement was that of Walter W. Jenkins, who had resigned as a special assistant to President Johnson after his arrest by the Washington police on a morals charge. Several of the clergymen who signed it, however, acknowledged that the campaign of Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona, the Republican Presidential candidate, had been the major impetus for the protest.

The statement was released by the Rev. Dr. John C. Bennett, president of Union Theological Seminary, at a sometimes stormy news conference at the Overseas Press Club at 54 West 40th Street, in New York.

Among those with Dr. Bennett at the meeting were the Rev. Dr. Abraham Heschel, of the Jewish Theological Seminary; the Rev. Dr. Edler G. Hawkins, moderator of the United Presbyterian Church; The Rev. Charles Whelan, a Jesuit who is a professor of law at Fordham University; and the Rev. George B. Ford, an eighty-year-old Roman Catholic priest who has long been associated with liberal causes.

At the outset, Dr. Bennett emphasized that the protest was not intended to be "technically or practically partisan." He said the signers were trying to "prevent morality from becoming irrelevant" by emphasizing that "however disturbing the increase in delinquency and violence in our nation, these are symptoms of a cultural condition for which solutions cannot be found primarily in the political sphere."

When pressed, however, Dr. Bennett said it was his opinion that there had been greater "oversimplification" of the morality issue in the Republican campaign than in the Democratic.

Dr. Heschel concurred in this view.

"Direct hatred and open prejudice are less obnoxious than moral pretentiousness," he said.

Father Whelan, who appeared at the news conference to give his views, but did not sign the statement, said [illegible] she in the campaign.

"The Republicans, however, have made more and larger mistakes," he continued. "But the cardinal mistake is to think that either political platform can solve this country's moral problems."

Several times during the conference, persons sitting in the audience rose to defend Senator Goldwater. One of them later turned out to be a newspaper reporter, but the others left before they could be identified.

Dr. Bennett said that the protest, one of many issued by church groups, at that time, had been framed before Senator Goldwater's speech in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. In that speech the Senator criticized "clerical spokesmen" who, he said, had become "loud advocates" of the President instead of "concentrating on morality."

Under Jordan Temple Ruins May Be Samaritan Shrine

Under the recently discovered ruins of a Roman temple in Jordan, archaeologists have uncovered the remains of another temple, which may turn out to be the ancient sanctuary of the Samaritans. The twin finds were made in a mound, known as Tel el-Ras, on Mount Gerizim, says the New York Times. The Samaritans, a dissident Jewish sect, held to the belief that God had chosen Mount Gerizim for Israel's central shrine.

Accordingly, the Samaritans built their shrine on the mount, and, to the present, the Samaritans' Passover rites are observed there.

The mount is part of the complex of ancient Schechem — now Jordanian Nablus — that has been under archaeological investigation by United States institutions since 1956.

The expeditions, under the direction of Prof. G. Ernest Wright, of Harvard University Divinity School, are sponsored by Drew University in Madison, N.J.; the McCormick Theological Seminary in Chicago; and, since 1960, Harvard University.

The new chapter, in an account of Biblical times being pieced together in the field by them, may settle the long-debated question of the location of the Samaritan temple.

It has been supposed that another peak of Mount Gerizim held the sanctuary, [illegible] visited each Spring for ritual observance by modern Samaritans. Further study is expected to provide an answer.

Schechem [illegible] first [illegible] which, under Jeroboam I, revolted against Rehoboam, King Solomon's son, says the New York Times, and formed the Northern Kingdom of Israel.

In the fourth century B.C., Schechem became headquarters for the Samaritans. Permission to build a temple on Mount Gerizim was secured from the reigning Persian King, Darius III, and later reaffirmed by his successor, Alexander the Great.

The temple and Schechem were destroyed in 128 B.C. by John Hyrcanus, high priest and prince of the Jews, on the refusal of the Samaritans to be converted to Judaism.

Former French Minister Asks Soviet To Let Jews Join Families Abroad

At the opening in Paris of a conference on Jews in the Soviet Union, Daniel Mayer, president of the League of the Rights of Man, and a former French minister, spoke in his introduction of the number of death sentences passed on Jews in Russia for economic crimes, says the London Times, and asked the Soviet authorities to allow Jews to join their families abroad.

The Soviet leaders had talked of a return to Leninism, he said, yet out of eight speeches made by Lenin in 1919 and recorded, only one had not been republished — the one entitled "the provocation by pogrom of the Jews". In this Lenin had described Tsarism as the tormentor and persecutor of the Jews.

Jacques Nantet spoke of the new pamphlet, Contemporary Judaism and Zionism, which had appeared at Kishinev, in Soviet Moldavia, in which Jews were accused of being linked with international espionage.

He also gave figures for Soviet publications in Yiddish. For the 472,000 Jews who had given Yiddish as their mother tongue, he said, there was only the Birobidjan [illegible] three times a week and had a circulation of 1,000; and a two-monthly literary magazine, Sovietisch Heimland. Between 1958 and 1961 five books had been published in Yiddish. Since 1962 there had been nothing.

In a telegram received in Paris Lord Russell (Bertrand Russell) declared that the treatment of Jews in the Soviet Union is a question that "causes the most grave concern". The denial of cultural expression and the accusations of parasitism, says the London Times, often no more than veiled campaigns of anti-Semitism, surprise everyone, he says.

German Military Aid To Israel, State Secret, Leaks Out

After reports that the West German Government was trying, in some cases successfully, to entice German scientists and engineers working on guided missile projects in Egypt back to their own country, reports have now leaked out that it has been giving military aid to Israel for some years. Why this aid, says the London Times, which has been handled as a state secret with the highest classification, has somehow been revealed is still a mystery.

According to one hypothesis, the source might be Herr Strauss himself who, as Defence Minister, together with Dr. Adenauer, negotiated this aid with President Ben-Gurion, and who might be anxious to marshal sympathy for his activity at the Defence Ministry.

Or it might be the Israelis, anxious to prove that the Federal Government could not queer its pitch with the Arabs more than it has done already by passing special legislation against German scientists in Egypt, or by establishing diplomatic relations with Tel Aviv.

Again, it might be the Federal Government as a whole, trying to show that it was not merely countering the activity of the scientists with platonic expressions of disapproval but making a positive and substantial contribution to Israeli defence.

The Federal Government has, however, refused to confirm or deny reports that this aid has been given and is still being provided. But Herr Strauss himself practically admitted that it existed in an interview with the Israel newspaper Haaretz, of Tel Aviv, says the London Times, in June last year when he referred to "reciprocal arrangements about which it is better not to speak openly".

Reports in the American press a year ago, which were well substantiated, referred to a military aid agreement over several years amounting to around DM.500m. (about £45m.). More recent reports in the German press spoke of aid to the tune of DM.900m. having already been provided.

This apparently consisted of arms and equipment, small vessels and aircraft, and financial assistance to the Israel defence industry. In addition, German scientists have also been working on nuclear research at the Weizmann Institute in Rehovot, and on other biological research. For these purposes DM.12m. is said to have been contributed so far, and a further DM.3,500,000 is provided for in the 1964 budget.

Two leading German nuclear scientists, Professor Hans Jensen and Professor Wolfgang Gentner, are assisting in this research. It is emphasized at Bonn that these scientists have nothing to do with the production of a nuclear weapon by Israel.

At the same time, the Federal Government is pursuing its efforts to persuade German scientists working in Egypt to return to West Germany. Already two of the three Germans heading the Egyptian rocket project have left; personal difficulties are delaying the return of the third, says the London Times. It is estimated at Bonn that about 20 to 30 are employed on the rocket project, and about 300 on aircraft production.

Deputy Premier Abba Eban denied that German scientists were taking part in Israeli nuclear research. There is no parallel in Israel to the presence of German scientists who are developing missiles in the United Arab Republic, he said, according to the New York Times. He made the statement in opposing a motion of no confidence in the Government. The motion was defeated.

Communists supporting the move had attacked what they called the "activity of West German scientists in Israel generally and in the nuclear sphere particularly."

Mr. Eban said that in the course of exchanging information on physics research, Israeli and German scientists and those of other countries might sometimes converge. He said not a month passed without visits to Israel by German scientists, authors, trade unionists, journalists, and others.

ROTHSCHILD ASKS FOR RABBIS AND TEACHERS FOR EUROPE

Baron Edmond de Rothschild, of France, asked The Jewish Theological Seminary of America to provide rabbis and teachers who will agree to take over pulpits and classrooms in Europe to help European Jewry recover from the catastrophic blow struck by the ruthless Hitler machine. Declaring that some of this institution's superb spiritual manpower would give tremendous impetus to the rebuilding of Jewry in the lands across the sea, the French financier and philanthropist called the Seminary an extension of the great academies of Europe which were destroyed by the Nazis.

"Here in America," he said, "is a citadel of Jewish learning that does more than hold promise of a continuing Judaism. The existence of this Seminary guarantees that the world community of Jews need not fear that our heritage will fall by the wayside; that our culture will stagnate."

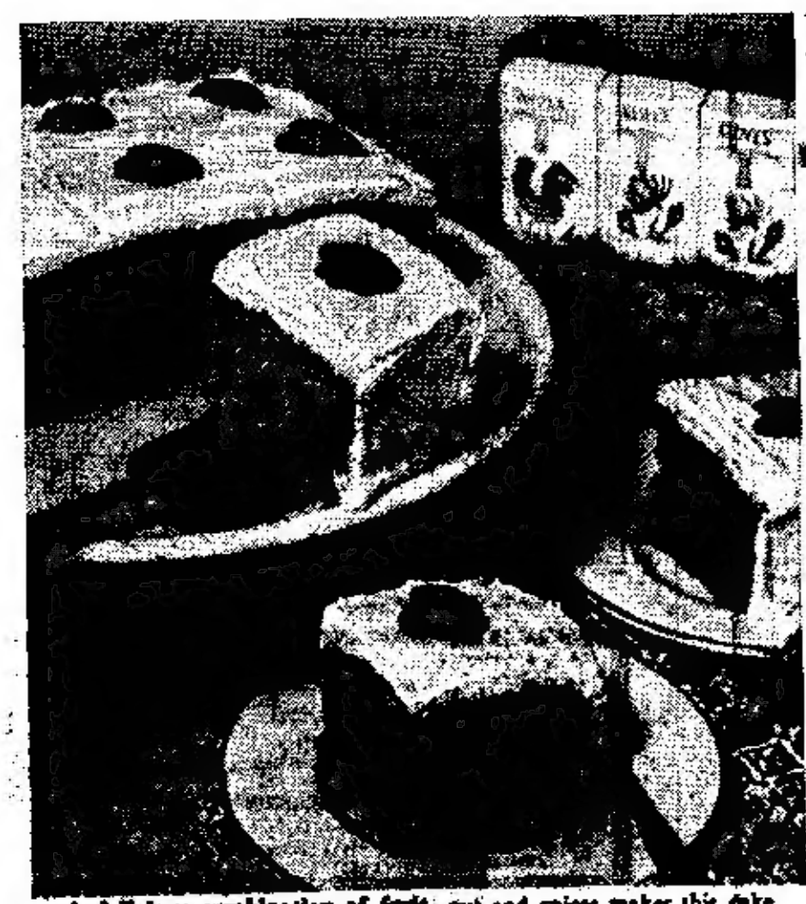
Baron de Rothschild made the request for religious leadership at a Seminary dinner given at the Americana Hotel, in New York, where he and eight American Jewish leaders were honored. Earlier in the day, Baron de Rothschild received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws at a convocation held at the Seminary. The accompanying citation pointed to his "contributions to human welfare, to the advancement of the State of Israel and to the cause of Judaism, and his magnificent efforts to preserve and advance in our time the traditions of a great family."

The award, a mounted bronze plaque, was presented to each recipient by Dr. Louis Finkelstein, chancellor of the Seminary, who earlier had conferred the honorary degree upon Baron de Rothschild. Dr. Bernard Mandelbaum, provost of the Seminary, also spoke at the dinner and pointed to religious leadership as the antidote for a veritable epidemic of sickly behavior that recently was evidenced by public apathy to tragic events. He cited, as examples, public indifferences to the near-fatal hazing of a student in Long Island, and to the incident in Albany, N.Y., where a crowd of on-lookers urged a deranged youth to jump to his death from the twelfth floor ledge of a hotel. This behavior, Dr. Mandelbaum said, reflects man at his lowest.

Such displays of moral misbehavior, Dr. Mandelbaum said, make it clear that the desperate need of these times is for a steady, growing stream of religious leadership, experts in the art and science of life, to teach the young and old alike."

Dr. Max Arzt, vice-chancellor of the Seminary, said: "The ecumenical spirit of our age pleads for the cooperation of diverse groups of believers, not for a union of beliefs. Judaism does not envision or welcome the concept of a society in which all distinctiveness of religious discipline and historic tradition is obliterated so that people might feel like insiders in the midst of a homogenized community."

O. Roy Chalk, chairman of the dinner, and Professor Saul Lieberman of the Seminary faculty, sponsored Baron de Rothschild for the honorary degree. The Baron was presented to Dr. Finkelstein by George M. Shapiro, New York attorney and friend of Baron de Rothschild. Alan M. Stroock, president of the corporation, presided over the convocation program. In the academic procession which opened the exercises were scholars, educators, public officials, and business leaders. Charles Rosengarten, president of the World Council of Synagogues; Rabbi William Berkowitz, leader of Congregation Bnai Jeshurun, in New York; and the choirs of the Cantors Institute of the Seminary, conducted by Professor Leo Kraft, took part.



I made it myself – with MAGIC!

Raisin-Pecan Cake

1 c. seedless raisins
2 c. boiling water
2 c. once-sifted pastry flour or 1½ c. once-sifted all-purpose flour
2½ tsps. Magic Baking Powder
¼ tsp. baking soda
¼ tsp. salt
1 tsp. ground cinnamon
¼ tsp. ground allspice
½ c. butter or Blue Bonnet Margarine
1 c. lightly-packed brown sugar
2 eggs
1 tsp. vanilla
½ c. chopped pecans

Simmer raisins in boiling water, covered, 15 mins. Drain well, saving ½ c. of the liquid. Cool. Sift together the flour, Magic Baking Powder, baking soda, salt, cinnamon and allspice. Cream butter or margarine; blend in brown sugar. Beat in eggs. Combine ½ c. raisin liquid and vanilla. Add dry ingredients to creamed mixture alternately with raisin liquid, combining lightly after each addition. Fold in raisins and chopped pecans. Turn into a greased 8-inch square cake pan, lined in bottom with greased waxed paper. Bake in moderate oven, 350°, 45 to 50 mins. Let cake stand in its pan on cake rack for 10 mins. Turn out onto rack; peel off paper; allow cake to cool completely. Frost cold cake with Cinnamon Butter Icing; decorate with pecan halves. Cut this tender cake with a saw-tooth knife.

Cinnamon Butter Icing Cream ¼ c. butter or Blue Bonnet Margarine; mix in ½ tsp. ground cinnamon and few grains salt. Gradually blend in 2 c. sifted icing sugar alternately with sufficient hot cream to make an icing of spreading consistency—about 2 tbsp. Mix in ½ tsp. vanilla.

A delicious combination of fruit, nut and spices makes this cake equally a favourite for dinner desserts or tea-time treats. And it's so easy with Magic Baking Powder!

ARON IS ONE OF 10,000 J.D.C. SET UP IN BUSINESS

The bitter memories of wartime Poland still haunt sixty-three year-old Aron Blumenfeld. Aron is now the prosperous owner of a pleasant little cafe in Dimona, a booming immigrant town in Israel's Negev desert. But even as he takes pride in the new life he is building he can't help remembering that awful day almost twenty-five years ago when the Nazis came to his little town in Poland.

The Nazis separated the men from the women. Aron managed to escape into the forest, where he joined the partisans. His wife and four daughters were shot by a Nazi execution squad and thrown into a mass grave. When the Red Army battled its way into Poland he joined the Russian troops and fought with them until 1945. It was on his return home that he learned of his family's extermination. Deep in despair, he wandered about trying to pick up the threads of his shattered life.

While searching for possible survivors among his family, he learned that two sisters were still alive. The sisters, believing Aron dead, had left Poland, one going to Canada and the other to Australia. He made further inquiries and could find only one other link with the past, a young woman, Erika, who had been a close friend of his eldest daughter. Drawn together by their tragic experiences, they became friendly. In time Aron asked her to marry him. Although he was nineteen years her senior, she accepted.

The Kielce pogrom in 1946 hardened Aron's resolve to leave Poland forever. He set out for Israel with his young wife, eager to start a new life. However, his wartime experiences had left him with a serious handicap, hypertension. In addition, he had no job, and because of his high blood pressure he was limited in the kind of work he could do. As a handicapped immigrant he came under the care of Malben, the welfare program on behalf of aged, ill, and handicapped newcomers to Israel, maintained by the Joint Distribution Committee, with funds from the United Jewish Appeal.

He was hospitalized several times and, in addition, Malben provided funds to enable him to open his own small cafe in Dimona. He was one of more than 10,000 handicapped immigrants who have been helped by JDC-Malben to set up a small, independent business.

Graceless, Grudging Attitude Of Protestant School Boards, Closed To Jews, Gets Good Drubbing From Jewish Congress Official

The Montreal Star said:

The national vice-president of the Canadian Jewish Congress challenged the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal to appoint members of the Jewish faith, even if they had no formal vote.

Hitting at the absence of Jews on the Greater Montreal and City of Montreal boards, Harold Lande, Q.C., called the matter "an inexcusable violation" of a basic tenet of democracy.

He asked Protestant members of the board to allow the matter to be taken to the courts "by default." If this were done, Mr. Lande said, he felt certain the courts would permit the seating.

Mr. Lande made his remarks before the Notre Dame de Grace Community Council as participant in a panel on "Education and School Board Changes in Montreal."

Another panel member, Hugh Savage, chairman of the Protestant Board of School Commissioners of the City of Montreal, admitted the absence of Jewish representation was "a serious enough problem." But, Mr. Savage said, the matter of taxation without representation was one to be taken up with government representatives.

Mr. Lande said taxation without representation existed because Jews are paying Protestant school taxes in Montreal and Outremont in excess of the percentage of enrolment of Jewish pupils in the schools.

He said lack of Jewish representation (based on a 1928 Privy Council interpretation of the BNA Act) was "repugnant to the dignity of the individual."

He said a committee of Jews has met with Protestant board members on the matter, but "there is not much interest or sincere desire on their part to give us the representation we seek."

Mr. Lande admitted Jewish parents are "exceedingly pleased" with the education and treatment accorded their children in Protestant schools.

But, he said, the relationship of the Jewish community to the Protestant school board is one of sufferance, on a contractual basis, rather than "one rooted in law."

Also on the panel was Dr. John McIlhone, representing the Montreal Catholic School Commission. Moderator was Charles Hewson, teacher of mathematics at Loyola College and former principal of Monklands High School.

The Montreal Gazette said:

The absence of Jews on Montreal Protestant School Board is "an inexcusable violation of one of the basic tenets of democracy, the vice-president of the Canadian Jewish Congress, Harold Lande, said.

In a strong and bitter attack against the reluctance of the boards to accept members of the Jewish faith, Mr. Lande said this policy implied "an inferior status — something we abhor."

He told the NDG Community Council meeting that for three years he has been trying to break the ice with the Protestant School Commissioners — but he felt almost completely frustrated in these attempts.

Mr. Lande, chairman of a special committee from the Jewish Congress which presented briefs to the Parent Royal Commission on education, said the outmoded system is "contrary to everything we've fought for in two wars, contrary to the declaration of equality, and contrary to the bill of rights."

He invited the Protestant commissioners to accept at least one Jew on the Montreal board — "just as an act of good faith, even if he doesn't have voting rights."

Mr. Lande, a lawyer, told the NDG meeting that 25 per cent of the students in Protestant elementary schools were Jews. In high schools, the figure was 35 per cent.

He added that before Bill 139 regarding school regions was passed earlier this year, 70 per cent of the taxation revenue in the City of Montreal and Westmount came from Jewish sources.

He described this as "taxation without representation," and said the Protestant Boards should make at least some effort to rectify "this anachronistic situation."

To fears that Jewish membership on boards would destroy their traditionally Protestant characters, Mr. Lande replied that the experiences in Westmount and Chomedey, where Jews are serving on Boards, have proved these fears groundless.

Speaking at the meeting also was Hugh Savage, chairman of the Montreal Board, subsidiary of the parent Greater Montreal Board.

He told Mr. Lande when segments of the public thought they were being "taxed without representation," their complaints should be directed against the government concerned.

He then asked Mr. Lande if he didn't think that the largest group of taxpayers should control the input and output of a public body.

The question went unanswered.

FROM THE ADDRESS OF CARDINAL LEGER, OF MONTREAL, AT THE VATICAN, CONDEMNING "HATE OF THE JEWS"

The News Bulletin of the Canadian Catholic Conference carried the full text of Cardinal Leger's remarks at the Ecumenical Council during the discussion of the Vatican document on Jews.

Speaking of "condemnation of the hate of Jews" the Cardinal said: "As it is said in the first paragraph of the schema, the Jewish people enjoy a special dignity. It should then be mentioned as a particular reason to condemn hate against the Jews . . . It should also be emphasized that the Catholic Church denounces particularly all outrages and injuries against Jews from which are born false philosophies or erroneous interpretations of Christian truth".

On "Union Between Jews And Christians" the Cardinal said: "It is only right to express the desire and the hope of the Church concerning the 'access' of Jews to the Catholic faith instead of speaking of their 'conversion'. The union with the Church of Christ does not imply, in fact, for the Jew to reject his former faith. Thus, in order to make more manifest the positive elements which unite the Jews and the Christians, we should, in the text itself, exhort the Jews to deepen their faith, read their holy books, meditate the history of salvation and pray God with the Psalms. All these things can only bring them to the plenitude of the grace and the truth, and the fact of mentioning them cannot hurt their psychology."

Dealing with "the attitude of the Christians towards the Jews" Cardinal Leger said: "The invitation 'to say and do nothing else which can turn away from the Jews' seems to me too general and even equivocal. It would be improved by being replaced by the following: 'to hold by words or actions anti-Jewish prejudices' ".

On the "deicide" issue Cardinal Leger's point was: "It is regretaable that the accusation of deicide against the Jews is not rejected more clearly. As the former text contained a rejection of this accusation, an unfavourable judgment on the Jews could easily be drawn from this statement. Surely, as the text itself says, we should see 'that the Jews of today should not be held responsible for what has been committed during the passion of Christ'. The real problem, however, is not that of the Jews of today but of the Jewish people as such. It should be stated explicitly that a fault should not be imputed to the Jews for which our crimes are responsible as well as the sins of all men, as is taught by the Christian tradition itself".

NOT "TWO RACES" BUT "TWO CULTURES" FOR EQUAL PARTNERSHIP AS BASIS OF CONFEDERATION

On a number of occasions, Canadian Jewish Congress has taken exception to the wording of the Terms of Reference of the Royal Commission on Biculturalism and Bilingualism which projects the Canadian Confederation on the basis of "an equal partnership between two founding races" and has asked for amendments in order to assure the Canadian people that Canadians of non-Anglo-Saxon or French origin will not be deprived of their equality as part of the nation. The latest official demarche was to the Prime Minister and several Cabinet members on October 19. It was suggested that this could be achieved if the term "races" would be eliminated and that the Royal Commission be instructed to recommend "steps to be taken to develop the Canadian Confederation on the basis of an equal partnership between the two cultures of the founding peoples".

The Prime Minister of Canada, the Rt. Hon. Lester B. Pearson, in a recent address in Montreal, in dealing with the problem of biculturalism and bilingualism, referred to Canada as "a federation of provinces based on two founding peoples, English-speaking and French-speaking, which it has developed as a multi-racial society", and said:

"Canadian national unity, which is essential, rests on the recognition and the acceptance of this dualism in our origin, and of this diversity in our development. The dualism must not be permitted to weaken or destroy us. It can be made one of our nation's greatest and strongest assets. Our nation is, and must remain, a sovereign political entity.

"In that sense it is, and must remain, one nation. Inside this entity, however, and it shouldn't be difficult for Anglo-Saxons to understand this, there is a French-speaking sector which, socially, culturally, and historically, has the nature of a national community, with the Province of Quebec as its heart and centre".

The Canadian Jewish Review is still the only Jewish publication in Canada printed in any language reaching the Jewish community which is not sponsored by a group or an organization and which is able to claim membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations.
